

The Future of Islamic Banking

Most of you are working in the conventional finance or banking industry and might not precisely know what Islamic finance is about. Islamic finance has grown steadily over the last 30 years. Year after year, there has been a continuous expansion of total Islamic finance assets as well as product sophistication, along with an ever-increasing number of countries, companies and institutions participating in the industry.

In recent years, growth has sparked optimism about the future of Islamic finance. However, as competition intensifies, Islamic financial banks are still left with work to do.

Dr Salma Sairally (PhD in Economics, Masters in Islamic Studies, Diploma in Islamic Banking and Finance, BSc in Economics and Finance) will help you understand the basic principles of Islamic Finance and the masterclass will be geared on the future of Islamic Finance.

This workshop will provide you with information on

- What is Islamic finance?
- How promising is the future of Islamic finance in the global economy?
- What are its key sectors of growth?
- What are the challenges and prospects of Islamic finance in Mauritius?
